NOTES FROM OUR PRESIDENT --

The Davis County Genealogical Society is your organization and will only be as successful as the effort each of us put into our meetings and work. I hope each of us attend as many meetings as possible and participate in as many of the projects we undertake as we can. Our vice president Pat Howk has and will schedule very interesting programs for our meetings. If you have an idea for a project or program, bring or sent it to the meeting and we can all discuss the pros and cons.

1/2Our CHMHTERY PROJECT is to re-walk the cemeteries in Roscoe and Prairie townships. We hope to get this done the last part of June or early in July. This information will be published and for sale later on. Walk time will be discussed at the June 20 meeting.

One problem most all family researchers encounter is the lack of interest on the part of their immediate family. It is important to us that our family supports and encourages our endeavor to discover their ancestors. We usually find a spouse that either whole heartedly supports our interest or he/she doesn't object to it. But our children are another story... They are either convinced that Mom/Dad has gone off the deep end with his/her interest in "dead" relatives, or they tolerate our enthusiasm with very little comment.

In my case, our daughter supports our interest but refuses to become involved in any type of research. She does ask a question from time to time, and even offered to help collate our book. However, the true depth of appreciation for our labor of love was revealed when our book was ready for distribution. She helped organize a family party in honor of the occasion and presented us with a little token of love along with a card that read:

"The children and I have seen five generations in part of our family and might possibly see five more. In that concept, it's easy to understand "family." What you have done is span generations not seen for years and bring it to sight within the covers of a book. Thanks Mom!"

We will continue our family research with the knowledge that even though our family chooses not to be actively involved in our interests, they do, in their own way, accept and support it.

I hope this personal experience will serve as a word of encouragement for others who find family history so rewarding and from time to time feel a little bit alone --Gleanings, Lee Co. G.S.Newsletter-Apr 1991. in their interest.

FOR THOSE WHO READ, "The History of the Four Golden Watches of the Four Hogue Sisters," in the last D.C.G.S. Newsletter, here is the rest of the story:

We had a show and tell meeting at the April Davis County Genealogical Society meeting. Mrs. Haselhoff, a Hague relative and one of our members, brought her golden watch to show. It was truly a beautiful 1862 or before ladies watch. She told us that after her step-mother died a few months ago, the golden watch she was to inherit couldn't be found. In moving a chest of drawers that her father had given her, and was to be hers after her step-mother died. to her home, a drawer accidently fell out of the chest. And, a secret compartment in this drawer opened up and out fell her golden watch. Her father had hid the watch in this drawer and by good luck, Rowena received the watch. Isn't this a funny world. Editor.

VISITING THE CEMETERY

Empty cemeteries on spring days used to scare me--if not exactly to death, thank goodness, at least to one of those rumbling-pit--of-the-stomach dreads. Remember that nasty old nursery rhyme about what happens to dead bodies? You know, the one that features the line "The worms crawl in, the worms crawl out"? Well, that's exactly where my cemetery sensations used to lie. There was just nothing nice that I could conjure up about a graveyard before my mother died and it became a place to visit from time to time.

And yet it isn't exactly familiarity that has bred this newfound cemetery ease in me. For even though I find myself on occasion standing alongside the grave marker with its pretty chiseled outmorning glory, my mother's name, and the years 1890-1985, I don't think I'd feel as easy about being there if it weren't for my children.

I've got to credit my children for my attitude readjustment because I'm sure I would have continued to wear invisible but very real blinders every time I turned into the drive of Graceland cemetery in Davidson County, S. D. The kids literally jerked my attention away from the sadness that surrounds a cemetery and toward the lives it represents. My forays back would have fallen into the perfunctory, guilt-provoked category of must-do's: "Let's make this quick" with a spray of flowers while we keep our emotional thoughts in check.

Nowadays, our talks at the cemetery rank right up there in my mind on that illusory list of quality ways to experience my children. Oh, I know for a fact that the oldest would never place a visit to his grandmother's grave in the same category as a baseball game and that his sister would choose an afternoon of Barbie play over this visit, but being able to listen to my children's conservations as we drive to the cemetery through countryside is something I now treasure. They've taken the trepidation out of my own reliving of unhappy memories and have managed to change the cemetery song's refrain that plays in my mind from worms crawling in and out to something much sweeter.

"AUDS AND ENDS CORNER"

Many of us have treasures that have been passed down from generation to genearation and never given thought to the history behind these articles, and so many of these small inheritances have contributed to my appreciation of history and antiques. I have learned that even as a child, there are fine old things that are very precious and really should be saved.

Several years ago, long after I was married, I returned to my hometown where I was raised. We had moved only a couple of blocks from my grandmother in the old house where I had spent most of my early life. One morning Granny came over to see me and while we were having coffee, Granny brought out this old kleenex and laid it on the table. As she unwrapped her tissue, my curiosity could hardly be contained, and finally Granny said, Rhonda, you are my first grandchild and granddaughter, and I want you to have these two pair of earrings. She said, I wore these when I was a girl and since you have pierced ears it's only fitting that you should have them. Needless to say how delighted I was over my "old" treasure and I promised Granny I would keep them always and hand them down to my daughters. After years of wearing my proud possessions, they are tucked away in a safe deposit box awaiting their time to be handed down again.

The months passed by and one day we decided it was time for us to move to another state. Grandmother hated to see us go as I'd take her to do her shopping as well as other errands she needed done. Shortly before we were to (Continued next page.)

leave, Granny came over carrying a small box under her arm. When she set the box on the table she proudly opened it and inside was a small berry bowl, again she explained why I was to have it. I recall Granny saying, "Your Grandpa and I got this berry set when we got married in 1912 before your mother was born." Oh, how her face lit up from the memories that crossed her mind. This big bowl is all I have left she explained, the smaller bowls were broken over the years. Along with the gift she had written a note with the date of their purchase and why I received it. Today my berry bowl is proudly displayed in my china cabinet for everyone to admire.

We do not have to hoard our hand-me-downs, but try to instill in our own children the love and worth of quality, tradition as well as the memories. Share these stories passed on by your ancestors, give them something of the past to tell their children. You may also have articles or things you have made-so what if they don't look store-bought. One day they will apprecaite the hand-made quilt, an afghan or dollie and perhaps an old painting, so amateurish-ly done by you as a child.

If you pass on a "OLD" item, be sure to follow your ancestors example and explain why your gift is important. It's these little inherited gifts and tales that mean so much.

--Audrey Hall

When asked why she never married, the writer, Marie Credit replied, "I never married because there was no need. I have three pets at home that answer the same purpose as a husband. I have a dog that growls every morning, a parrot that swears all afternoon, and a cat that stays out all night."

KANSAS RESEARCH--The Midwest Historical and Genealogical Society, 1203 N. Main St., Wichita, KS, opened its new research Library in May 1990.--Warren Co., G.S.

DID YOU KNOW THAT--In genealogy, the term LINHAL means ascending or descending in a direct line; COLLATERAL means descended from the same ancestor but not in a direct line of descent; ALLIED FAMILIES are families related usually through marriage.

AN ANCESTRY begins with a single individual and traces back in time to include the male and female lines of that person's ancestors. A full eight generations of one's ancestry would involve 511 persons.

A GENEALOGY, on the other hand, begins with a single ancestor and traces forward in time to include all descendents to the present.

NOTE: I received this letter addressed to our Chapter. I know nothing about the person, but felt there might be some people interested in German Genealogy that would appreciate some help in their search. Editor.

Dear Mrs. Arnold:

March 30, 4991

with this letter I will give you some informations.

I do research work in a part of the northern region of Germany.

On the backside of this letter you find a detailed list of all records

I have or know about: co(marriage), * (birth), + (death).

I am 39 years old and work at the Courthouse in Bremerhaven as a secretary. I promise you, that I am fair (sincere). I do all the researching in my sparetime. In the past 10 years I collected a lot of informations from the churchbooks.

If necessary or by request I can give photostats of the churchbooks, but only about the following years: 1715-1726, 1746, 1751, 1752, 1759-1852.

About some villages I have also data after 1900 to nearly the present time of before the beginning of the churchbooks. I would be glad, if I hear from you. Also I would be glad, if you can publish my name with my search work in your publication of your organization and furthermore can give my address to people, who want to know more about their ancestors of the villages I am working on.

By request I will go searching in other villages in Northern Germany. I am very interesting in helping other people in return for a little remuneration (13 Dollars per hour of work plus mileage and postage). For the village Misselwarden I have put together an Ortsippenbuch (village lineage book). The volume is 334 pages and contents all families between 1680-1900. It cost 45 Dollars incl. postage (surface mail). Air mail 10 Dollar especially. Are you interesting in buying such a book?

If you or anybody else send me money, please as a Dollar bill (cash), because the german banks exact a large service fee for handling of foreign checks if you send me one. For this I have to claim 10 Dollar especially. Thank you for your attention.

Union Cemetery renovation complete

Families with ancestors buried in Union Cemetery will see a big change when they visit.

No longer are stones falling over or blackened by age and unreadable. New concrete bases support some grave markers and others have been sandblasted. A chain link ience now surrounds the small burial place a couple of miles southwest of Pulaski.

"It looks as nice as any cemetery in the county," said nearby resident John Swartzendruver. "People are saying now they'd like to be buried there."

While township trustees have levied taxes to cover mowing costs, there has never been any charge for burial there and no funds were ever appropriated for upkeep. Time took its toll.

But a spruce-up project initiated last year paid off, much to the amazement and delight of Swartzendruver, Ed Amstutz, Carmyn Willer, Peth Bunting and others who pitched in. Organtzers got together and jotted down names of people with family buried in Union Cemetery. About 120 letters seeking donations were sent out a year ago last February after the group got estimates on how much the restoration would cost.

"Lo and behold, the $5,000 came in," said Swartzendruver. Checks began pouring in from persons in Washington state,

Brooklyn, N.Y. "and about every state in between."

Much of the renovation was accomplished last summer, but a few jobs remained this spring. The final stone was turned last week.

And not a moment too soon, said Swartzendruver. About the time the project was done, the money ran out: "When we got through, we had $46 left in our account," he said.
