

Henry Regenberg was injured in a construction accident, and passed away on 24 August 1911, at the age of 29 years, at Omaha, Nebraska. Henry's newspaper obituary states that "he had accepted a position with a bridge construction company about a year before his death and while in their employ near Sheldon clearing away a wreck about the middle of last January, the accident which cost him his life occurred". Henry was seriously hurt at his job in January of 1911 - he appeared to be better until May of 1911 "when he became worse, and was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital in Omaha where he remained until his death." Henry died 24 August 1911 at Omaha, Nebraska. He, too, is buried next to his mother and brother. Henry never married.